Louis Sennet and C. A. Mitchell have Their Preliminary Examination.

No Evidence Given that Intended to Incriminate the Two Men—
Additional Testimony.

On Monday afternoon at three o'clock Louis B. Sennett and C. B. Mitchell had their preliminary examination before Justice S. K. Williams as a consequence of the verdict of the coroner's jury rendered on the Friday previous. Several new witnesses were examined and after listening to the testimony the defendants were promptly discharged from custody. It was further shown that the men who own the Mitchell saloon were expecting a hold-up; that an altercation which had occurred in their place the evening before had put them on their guard and when Johnson stepped into the door of the tent with his Winchester and opened fire, he received a warm reception which he had not anticipated. The fact was also proven that when drinking Johnson was quarrelsome and the testimony showed that before starting for the lower saloon he fortified himself with three or four drinks in the upper saloon besides taking his turn at a bottle which was passed around on the outside.

Eugene Hopper was on the stand again yesterday. He told about being in Mitchell's saloon night of 25th the evening before the killing. That a man named Gunn made some remark he did not like and he struck him with his fist and had his six-shooter in his hand when he backed out the door. Hopper testified that he had known Jesse Johnson about twelve years. That on the evening of the 25th he was at Silver Creek in company with Johnson but he remained at Upper saloon. That on the evening of the 26th they were again at the Upper saloon and Johnson said that he heard that those boys down at the lower saloon intended to kill him. Continuing Hopper said: "I told Johnson I didn't believe it. He said he would go down there and see those boys as he had heard they had said we intended to hold up the place. Shortly after the shooting another man and myself started for the lower saloon and met Sennet riding Johnson's horse. He halted us and said Johnson was dead, and that if any of his partners were around they would get them also." I tried to persuade Johnson not to go down to that saloon because I was told the saloon had a bad reputation. A man named Silvery told me not to go down there because those men said they would shoot the top of my head off."

A Mr. Gunn testified to the trouble with Hopper in Mitchell's saloon the night previous, and said Hopper had a gun in his hand when he backed out of the saloon although he apologized for striking him before he left.

James Gneed was again on the witness stand and testified subsequently the same as he did before the Coroner's jury describing how Johnson appeared in the door of the tent and opened fire wounding Roberts and turning his gun on Mr. Sennett who was in the middle of the room standing by the stove.

Jim Johnson, who was at the upper saloon, testified to Jesse Johnson leaving there. "I told him not to go; if he went down there he would get into trouble and he said he wasn't going down there to have any trouble. As far as I could tell he was not in an angry state of mind. He rode my horse down there and had my 20-30 rifle which was on my saddle, also his six-shooter."

E. Silvey was the man who told Hopper not to go down to the lower saloon on the 26th. He gave as his reason that the saloon men thought Hopper intended to hold up the saloon after the trouble which occurred the night previous.

C. W. Rich was sleeping in his tent about 100 yards from the saloon. He heard someone say "Here is where you get a free roll" and then the shooting commenced. Afterwards a voice said, "If anyone shows up, nail him," and later another voice said, "For God's sake, don't shoot him any more," and the last thing he heard was, "Where is Roberts shot?" Mr. Rich did not leave his tent that night.

Mr. McCarty, McDonald and John Bowman all testified to Johnson leaving the upper saloon for Mitchell's place with a rifle and a six-shooter.

Mr. Sennett again told exactly what occurred the night of the shooting and at the conclusion Judge Williams discharged the defendants from custody.
